I SPY some marvelous new books for Women's History Month!

Dear Readers, Say goodbye to winter! Spring is here this month! And it's a hopeful time, a good time to plant an idea or grow a new habit. And you might like a good book for your spring break. If you need help finding one/some, check out all the ideas in this zine and/or call Shelf Help for kids at (816) 701-3597. Love, the Editor

This is a neat book. It has almost no words, so you get to make up the story! The title is HIKE by Pete Oswald. And you who knows? You might take a hike on your spring break!

Results: The image is distorted because the light bouncing off your finger and passing through the water in the glass has slowed down and changed directions. The bent beams of light spread the image out, so your finger—or your friend's face—looks big.

1. Find a clear glass drinking glass.
2. Fill it with water.
3. Look at something like your finger or a friend's face through the water.

Bend a little light!

Yak-butter tea please!

"Po cha, or butter tea, is traditional in Tibet. A brick of dark tea is simmered in water. Later, milk, yak-milk butter, and salt are added. The mixture is churned until it's thick like creamy soup, then sipped from a wooden bowl."
